Extracts FROM THE PREFACE:
It has been the writer's aim in the volume to furnish in with a true sketch of life in the Itinerani Ministry. While several works illustrating the various features of a settled pastorate have been given to the public this is, so far as the author's knowledge extends, the first effort to delineare domestic life in the littlerancy. The numerous hiographies of such as have labored in this connection, which have been published within the last few years, are rich in interest, and should be allowed a prominent place in our literature; but they almost uniformly fail to enter the minister's household, and point out what is being done and suffered in the family circle, as well as on the circuit and station.

"KEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE."

Good advice from the right quarter.

Says The N Y. Independent:

"This work comprises the fallest and most complete account yet published of the life of this extraordinary mm, and, by its plain and irrefragible facts, forestails and silences the whole immense brood of malignant slanders with which the Pro-Slavery party are endeavoring to fill the public mind."

Says The National Fra (Washington, D. C.):

"We refer to Mr. Bigelows work, not to disparage the labors of others on the same subject, but because it is prepared with excellent judgment by at intimate friend of Fremont, and is the outplicgraphy which contains an adequate account, not only of the public services, but of the private bis-ory of our candidate. It is, therefore, a volume which no Republican should fail to possess. It will not only prove an efficient weapon in the present campaign, but a spirited rarrative—worthy of permanent preservation—of one of the brilliant chapters in our country's history. Let our Fagenos, THERE YORE ARM THEMSELVES WITH BIGELO V'S LIFE OF FREMONT."

THE LIFE OF MARY JEMISON,
THE WHITE INDIAN WOMAN OF THE GENESEE.
By James E. Seaver, esq. 312 pages, illustrated. Price $1.
The subject of this remarkable narrative was taken captive by a band of Shawness at the age of 13 years. She subsequently became the wife of an indian chief, and the mother of a large family of Indian children. She lost her civilized havist, and resided with her adopted natin for seventy-eight years, always, however, retaining and manifesting a constant friendship for the whites. She was granted a reservation of 19,000 acres of the richest lands in the world, lying in the western part of the State of New York. Yet thus did not tempt her to abandon her adopted race or habits, to which she pertinucleusly adhered. The narrative was taken by the author from her own lips, and is at once anthestic, interesting and instructive.
